

More about Human Language Technology

Washing machines already speak Hindi. A personal digital assistant (PDA) capable of translating between languages might be your new interpreter next time you travel. Your future car may come equipped with an electronic map and a voice to give you directions. While digital librarians and secretaries already exist, most of them only understand English!

What is human language technology? How important is it to incorporate the Norwegian language into this sphere of technological development? What are the consequences of not doing so? What role can a collection of Norwegian language resources play in the further development of this technology?

The Norwegian Language Council

C.J. Hambros plass 5
P.O. Box 8107 Dep
NO-0032 Oslo
Telephone: (+47) 24 14 03 50

Consolidating and Increasing the Availability of Norwegian Human Language Technology Resources

Project group appointed by the Ministry of Culture and Church Affairs
Report delivered October 2002